Conditional Use Permits

The City of Rohnert Park Zoning Code divides the city into a number of land use districts or “zones.” For each zone, there is a list of land uses which categorizes these uses as either “Permitted” or “Conditionally Permitted.” Uses listed as “Conditionally Permitted” are only allowed subject to the issuance of a Conditional Use Permit from the Planning Commission. The Conditional Use Permit process is intended to allow the City discretionary review of land use proposals which, because of their nature, may be suitable only if certain conditions of approval are incorporated into the proposal. In doing so, the City can ensure that such uses will be compatible with surrounding land uses and the general public interest. As an example, a commercial zone generally allows a restaurant as a permitted use; however, live entertainment in the restaurant may require a conditional use permit to ensure that the impacts associated with the entertainment would not negatively affect surrounding land uses.

Review Process

Applicants are encouraged to meet with Staff prior to submitting a formal conditional use permit to ensure that the impacts associated with the entertainment would not negatively affect surrounding land uses.

This pre-application meeting allows the applicant to discuss the proposal with Staff and to determine whether or not there is a likelihood of the project being approved by the Planning Commission. The meeting also allows the applicant an opportunity to learn of any initial changes that may be required of the project and to modify the plan accordingly prior to formal submittal of the Conditional Use Permit application.

Once the formal application is submitted, Staff has 30 days in which to determine if all required materials and information has been received. If the application is incomplete, Staff will advise the applicant of the additional items required. If the application is judged complete, the City's Technical Review Committee (TRC) will have the opportunity to review the proposal. Among the items reviewed will be building placement and size, traffic generation, compatibility with adjoining properties, compliance with standards and regulations, and other potential impacts.

An environmental review may also be conducted and appropriate documentation prepared. Staff then provides a written recommendation on the project to the Planning Commission, which considers the application at a public hearing. In accordance with Government Code Section 65091, a notice of public hearing shall be mailed to all property owners within 300 feet of the perimeter of the property. Based on the staff recommendation and input from any other interested parties, the Planning Commission may approve or deny the application at a public hearing, and may impose various conditions of project approval related to design, location, construction, operation, duration, and other compatibility factors.

After the Planning Commission's decision, there is a ten- (10) working day period during which either the applicant or any interested party may file an appeal of the decision. If a Conditional Use Permit is approved and no appeal is filed within ten (10) days, the application may proceed to the building permit stage.
